

Plane That Landed At Wrong Branson Airport Back In The Air

<http://www.kttn.com/kgozfm/modules/news/article.php?storyid=111081>

Plane That Landed At Wrong Branson Airport Back In The Air News

Posted by : Randy

Posted on : 2014/1/14 4:17:47

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — The Southwest Airlines jet that landed at the wrong Missouri airport is now heading back into service.

The Boeing 737 took off around 3 p.m. Monday from M. Graham Clark Downtown Airport in Taney County. Southwest spokeswoman Michelle Agnew says the jet will travel to Tulsa, Okla., for fueling, then return to service.

Southwest Airlines Flight 4013 was traveling from Chicago Midway Airport bound for Branson Airport Sunday night. It landed instead at the smaller airport, 7 miles away.

No one was hurt but a passenger described the landing as abrupt. The runway at M. Graham Clark airport is a little more than half as long as the Branson Airport.

Southwest says the pilot and first officer were removed from flying pending an investigation. The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating.