(semissourian.com)- A Marble Hill, Mo., man is dead, and his brother is in custody after a domestic dispute, the Bollinger County Sheriff's Department reported.

Deputies responding to a report of a domestic dispute involving a firearm found Jessie Liley, 50, with a gunshot wound, the department reported Thursday.

Bollinger County Coroner Charles Hutchings later declared Liley dead, according to a news release from Bollinger County Sheriff Darin Shell.

Officers arrested Lonnie Liley, 42, at the scene, the department reported.

According to the news release, deputies went to County Road 512 about 9:30 a.m. in response to a report about a domestic dispute between two brothers.

Details were sketchy. A woman answering the phone at the sheriff's department declined to release any details about the case, including the charges against Lonnie Liley, but she said the department would release more information later.

Aside from a pair of traffic violations in the late 1990s, online court records show no prior offenses for Lonnie Liley.

In 2007, Jessie Liley pleaded guilty to possession of a controlled substance and was placed on five years' supervised probation. He was granted an early release from his probation in 2010, online court records show.

In 2000, Jessie Liley faced several drug charges, including manufacturing a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession with intent to distribute, according to online court records. The charges later were amended, but the amended charges and the disposition of the case were unclear.
