A prepared statement has been released by attorneys representing three local entities regarding litigation brought against them but dismissed recently in Grundy County Circuit Court.

The City of Trenton, North Central Missouri College, and Grundy County Friends of the Arts informs the public that the disputed litigation brought against them by Butler, Rosenbury and Partners of Springfield, Missouri has been permanently dismissed as the result of a settlement.

Terms of the settlement, while not defined in the news release, were said to be mutually agreed upon by all the parties in an effort to avoid what were described as lengthy court proceedings. The statement goes on to state the settlement was made with the understanding that all three entities continue to deny any liability for the matters upon which suit was brought against them.

An attorney indicated that the entities can not release the dollar amount.

The suit had contended breach of contract regarding architectural services for a proposed performing arts center at Trenton.
